The World Congress of Soil Science 2022 has been held every four years since 1927 as a scientific meeting in the field of soil science. The WCSS will gather a large number of scientists and industry together, over 3,000 expected participants from 140 countries around the world. This will be an excellent learning experience, exchange of knowledge and technical advances, as well as an opportunity for like-minded organisations who work in the area.

The WCSS will take place over five-days at the SEC in Glasgow, 31 July 2022 to the 5 August 2022, and will encompass a range of activities including keynote addresses, workshops, symposia, an indoor exhibition hall, tours and soil judging. 'Our Living Soil' will run alongside WCSS, will engage the general public on the cultural importance of soil and include exhibitions, digital storytelling and collaborative works with the local community. The wide-reaching scope of WCSS offers a unique opportunity for organisations and individuals to reach influencers and decision makers in the industry, cultivate opportunities, and promote public engagement with soil science.

1. Organiser Details

Before you begin planning your proposed event to be held alongside the World Congress of Soil Science 2022 there are a few details we need from you.

We have limited space to hold fringe events at the Congress and cannot guarantee that we will be able to provide space to all those who request it. So that we are fair and transparent, if you would like to host a fringe event at the Congress, which will only be open to those who successfully register to attend the Congress, please complete the application form below.

The closing date for submitting requests to hold fringe events is Monday 31 January 2022 at 5:00pm GMT. We will review and consider all applications in February and notify successful and unsuccessful applicants in March 2022.

Your details will be kept confidential and only used in line with data protection guidelines.
